The present study has come up with the following conclusions:

1. Rendering the Glorious Qur’an into English general and its deictic expressions in particular need highly competent translators who should be quite aware or the source and target structures.

2. The deictic expressions found in the Glorious Qur’an are of different types, namely, five types are identified: personal, place (or spatial), time (or temporal), social and discourse deixis.

3. The most difficult deictic expression in translation is the personal deixis where the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd persons are easy to understand but their reference is difficult to see (See sec. 4.2.1)
